Ecdysone (20-hydroxyecdysone) has been shown to be responsible for the molting stage of the five larval stages of Bombyx mori. In this study, we have characterized the ecdysone receptor (BR-Z1), which is known to be responsible for ecdysone-induced molt in B. mori, and have localized it in midgut epithelial cells and fat body cells. By in situ hybridization, both midgut epithelial cells and fat body cells were found to express the BR-Z1 mRNA. By immunohistochemistry, BR-Z1 protein was localized to the midgut cells but not to the fat body cells. The ecdysone receptor was also found to be localized in the endoplasmic reticulum, which indicated that BR-Z1 could be activated by direct binding of the hormone. We have demonstrated that the ecdysone receptor was localized in the nuclei of both the midgut epithelial cells and the fat body cells. These results suggest that the ecdysone receptor is expressed and that ecdysone binds directly to the nuclei to cause the activation of the ecdysone receptor in both midgut epithelial cells and fat body cells.Q: How do I make a domain to behave like my IP? I have a web app that uses for the protocol, not or The authentication section requires me to authenticate through https, I want to use the same certificate and private key from my godaddy account, however, godaddy does not have a wildcard cert. I have tried to use a certificate with a wildcard, but that caused all sorts of problems I would like to use the same certificate I was using to login to another app on my personal domain (Is there a way to do that?
